

Rural School Nutrition Directors Network

School nutrition staff are heroes on the frontline of the fight against child hunger. The Rural School Nutrition Directors Network is a professional peer network tailored to the strengths, constraints, and needs of rural school food service departments. The network provides opportunities for individuals working in rural school food service departments to share ideas, experiences, and effective practices to increase access to nourishing food among children in rural communities.

Network goals are to increase participant knowledge via online webinars and training in best practices, share resources to strengthen rural school food service delivery, and provide support through strengthened connections with other practitioners across America's rural communities. The Network meets virtually monthly.

Membership in the network is free and open to any director of a rural school food service department. Click here to enroll.

Monthly webinars

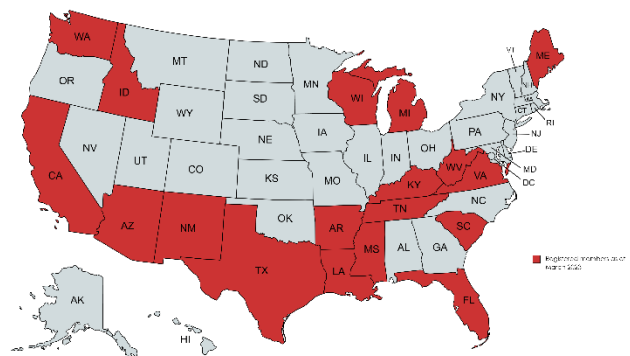

- Training and technical assistance
- Resource sharing
- Peer networking

Resources for members

- Grants
- Program supplies
- Gift in Kind donations

Professional development support

- Conference registration fees
- Trade association membership fees

63 members representing 18 states as of March 2023

To learn more contact communityimpact@savechildren.org

